Abstract

Fatwa plays an important role in the development of Islamic financial institutions. However, the existence of fatwa is closely related to developing political dynamics, so it influences the formation of regulations on Islamic financial institutions, especially in Indonesia. This paper discusses the legal politics of the existence of fatwa in Islamic financial institutions established by the National Shariah Council - Indonesian Ulama Council. Normative juridical research method with a comparative approach to various fatwas in Malaysia, Sudan, Pakistan, Indonesia, Singapore, the Philippines and Thailand. The research results show the differences in the existence of fatwas between Muslim-majority and Muslim-minority countries; for example, Muslim-majority countries such as Malaysia, Sudan, Pakistan, and Indonesia are centralized. In contrast, Muslim-minority countries such as Singapore, the Philippines, and Thailand are decentralized. In Indonesia, the fatwa of the National Shariah Council - Indonesian Ulama Council was influenced by the political dynamics of the relationship between the Muslims and government during the New Order and Reformation era. During the New Order era the relationship between the Muslims and government was antagonistic (1966–1981) had critical reciprocity (1982–1985) and was accommodative (1986–1998). In the Reformation era (1998 to present), the relationship between Muslims and the government was accommodative and participatory. The fatwa of the National Shariah Council - Indonesian Ulama Council has been legally binding for Islamic financial institutions since the reformation era (1998 to present) because regulations regarding Islamic financial institutions in Indonesia require that their business activities must be based on the fatwa of the National Shariah Council - Indonesian Ulama Council.

Introduction

Fatwa plays an important role in the development of Islamic financial institutions.1 Fatwa is a legal opinion given by a scholar (faqih) to a person or community regarding a problem for which there is no law.2 In Muslim-majority countries, fatwa institutions have been established. For example, Malaysia has a fatwa institution called the Shariah Advisory Council,3 Sudan has a fatwa body called the Higher Shariah Control Commission (HSCC),4 Pakistan has a Shariah Board,5 and Indonesia has a National Shariah Council (Dewan Syar’ah Nasional-DSN) called the Indonesian Ulama Council (Majelis Ulama Indonesia-MUI).6 In contrast to Malaysia, Sudan, Pakistan, and Indonesia, there is no fatwa institution at the national level specifically related to the field of Islamic economics in Singapore, the Philippines, and Thailand. However, each of the Islamic financial institutions in Singapore, the Philippines, and Thailand may appoint a shariah advisory board to provide legal opinions (fatwa) on sharia compliance.7

The role of fatwa institutions in various countries is influenced by political dynamics that affect the applicable laws in each country, including in Indonesia.8 Fatwa National Shariah Council - Indonesian Ulama Council Fatwa is a basis for legal decisions about the economics, business, and finance for Islamic financial institutions.9 The change of fiqh into fatwa National Sharia Council - Indonesian Ulama Council Fatwa is a process of uniformity from various views and thoughts of fuqaha so that it becomes one uniform legal provision through a collective ijtihad process by the National Sharia Council - Indonesian Ulama Council Fatwa.10 The process contextualizes fiqh norms into the social framework of society, where fiqh norms that were originally unstructured and diverse undergo a process of simplification, adjustment, and change into structured and uniform legal provisions.11

Fatwa National Shariah Council - Indonesian Ulama Council Fatwa is legally formal and is not included in the hierarchy of laws and regulations in Indonesia because fatwa is not made by an institution or body that is given the authority to form laws and regulations.12 Therefore, fatwa National Shariah Council - Indonesian Ulama Council Fatwa does not have a binding legal force before it is transformed into a form of legislation.13 However, in terms of legal substances, fatwa National Shariah Council - Indonesian Ulama Council Fatwa played an important role in the history of the development of Islamic economic laws in Indonesia, including Islamic financial institutions. Fatwa National Shariah Council - Indonesian Ulama Council Fatwa is used as a basis for issuing products or conducting business activities in Islamic financial institutions.14 This means that Islamic financial institutions may not issue products or conduct business activities in the form of funding, financing, or services contrary to the fatwa of National Shariah Council - Indonesian Ulama Council Fatwa.

This paper discusses the legal existence of Islamic economic fatwas in Indonesia using a comparative approach to other countries. The background of the issuance of fatwa National Shariah Council - Indonesian Ulama Council Fatwa and the legal existence of fatwa National Shariah

Shariah Economic Fatwa Institutions: A Comparison with Other Countries

The Islamic economic fatwa body in Malaysia is called the Shariah Advisory Council (Majelis Penasihat Syariah).\(^{19}\) It was established by Bank Negara Malaysia (Central Bank of Malaysia) in May 1997 as a fatwa-making authority in the field of Islamic economics (banks, insurance, and other Islamic financial institutions). The duties and powers of the Shariah Advisory Council have changed with the amendment of the Central Bank of Malaysia Act.

The establishment of the Shariah Advisory Council is based on Laws of Malaysia Act 519 Central Bank of Malaysia Act 1958 (revised 1994), where the Central Bank of Malaysia is given the authority to establish such an institution. The duties and powers of the Shariah Advisory Council are to ensure the application of Islamic law to the business activities of Islamic banking, insurance, Islamic finance, and other Islamic financial institutions regulated and supervised by the Central Bank of Malaysia. Additionally, the Shariah Advisory Council may provide an advice or legal opinion to arbitrators and courts.

In 2009, the duties and powers of the Shariah Advisory Council were amended and strengthened by Laws of Malaysia Act 701 Central Bank of Malaysia Act 2009. The duties and powers of the Shariah Advisory Council are to not only ensure the application of Islamic law in Islamic financial institutions but also establish Shariah compliance for Islamic financial institutions. Additionally, the Shariah Advisory Council's legal decisions are binding on not only Islamic financial institutions but also arbitration and judicial bodies that resolve Islamic economic disputes.

The method of fatwa determination by the Shariah Advisory Council is formulated through collective ijtihad by several muftis appointed by the Central Bank of Malaysia.24

The Islamic economic fatwa institution in Sudan is called the HSCC. The institution was established by the Sudanese government in 1992 under the Banking Business (Organization) Act, 1991.25 The position of the HSCC is institutionally stronger because it is established by the president. The HSCC is the first shariah economic fatwa institution in the world, and its duties and authorities are directly regulated by law.26 The HSCC shall consist of at least 7 and not more than 11 persons from various fields of knowledge, including shariah, economics and finance, and law experts who are required to master shariah sciences and appointed by the president (Banking Business (Organization) Act, 2003).27 The fatwa was issued by the HSCC as a binding Shariah compliance guideline and reference for Islamic banking in Sudan.

The Islamic economic fatwa institution in Pakistan is called the Shariah Board, which was established around 2004 by the State Bank of Pakistan (SBP).28 The Shariah Board is appointed by the SBP from various scientific fields, including Shariah experts, lawyers, accountants, and bankers. However, it is not the only commission authorized to issue fatwas. Islamic economic fatwa can be formed not only by the Shariah Board but also by the Shariah Advisor.29 Shariah Advisors are appointed by each Islamic Banking Institution (IBI) on the basis of the approval of the SBP.30

Fatwa issued by the Shariah Advisor-IBI is automatically binding for each IBI.31 However, if there is a difference of opinion between the Shariah Advisor and the SBP regarding the operation of Islamic banking, the fatwa issued by the Shariah Board-SBP can be referred to resolve it. The SBP made the fatwa issued by the Shariah Board-SBP as a guideline and reference for shariah compliance that is binding for Islamic banking in Pakistan after an announcement (decision letter).32

The Islamic economic fatwa institution in Indonesia is called the National Shariah Council - Indonesian Ulama Council Fatwa, established on February 10, 1999.33 In contrast to Malaysia, Sudan, and Pakistan, the National Shariah Council - Indonesian Ulama Council Fatwa was not formed by the government or the central bank (Bank Indonesia) but by the Indonesian Ulama Council.34 The National Shariah Council - Indonesian Ulama Council performs the duties of the Indonesian Ulama Council in determining fatwas on economics, business, and Islamic finance and supervising their application in Islamic financial institutions.35 A comprehensive discussion of the National Shariah Council - Indonesian Ulama Council fatwa is provided in the following subdiscussion.

In contrast to Malaysia, Sudan, Pakistan, and Indonesia, researchers did not find fatwa institutions in the field of Islamic economics at the national level in Singapore, the Philippines, and Thailand. However, each Islamic financial institution may appoint a Shariah Advisory Board. For example, Islamic financial institutions in Singapore have a Shariah Advisory Board, and the Philippines and Thailand have a Shariah Advisory Council.

The duties and authority of the Shariah Advisory Board and Shariah Advisory Council in Singapore, the Philippines, and Thailand include supervising and providing legal opinions related to shariah compliance at each Islamic financial institution. The duties and authority of the Shariah Advisory Board and Shariah Advisory Council is as regulated in the Monetary Authority of Singapore's Guidelines on the Application of Banking Regulations to Islamic Banking (revised 2021), Republic Act No. 6848 and Republic Act No. 11439 (Islamic banking regulations in the Philippines), and the Islamic Bank of Thailand Act 2545 BE enacted in 2002 and Bank of Thailand Notification No. 19/2559 BE in 2016 as Islamic banking regulations in Thailand. The legal opinions issued by the Shariah Advisory Board and Shariah Advisory Council are only internally binding for the respective Islamic financial institutions.

Legal Politics of the Existing of Fatwa National Shariah Council - Indonesian Ulama Council

The existence of fatwa National Shariah Council - Indonesian Ulama Council cannot be separated from the legal political configuration in Indonesia. Mahfud MD explains legal politics as legal policy or what is called the official state policy line related to the law to be applied by either making new laws or replacing old laws to achieve state goals.38

The study of the legal politics of the formation of Islamic economic regulations and policies will certainly not be separated from political and economic issues.39 Similarly, the background governing the issuance of National Shariah Council - Indonesian Ulama Council fatwa is closely related to the political law governing the formation of Islamic economic regulations and policies. Additionally, the development of Islamic economic institutionalization in Indonesia, symbolized by Islamic banks, greatly influenced the birth of the National Shariah Council - Indonesian Ulama Council fatwa.

First, the legal politics of shariah economic regulation and policy formation is one of the factors behind the existence of the National Shariah Council - Indonesian Ulama Council fatwa. The political situation during the reign of President Suharto (1966-1998)40 can be described from the relationship and actions between the government and Muslims as follows (see Figure 1):

During Suharto's presidency, the relationship between the Muslims and government was divided into three phases: antagonistic (1966–1981), critical reciprocal (1982–1985), and accommodative (1986–1998). The political situation at that time affected the existence of sharia economic law in Indonesia, which is characterized by the development and renewal of sharia economic law.

In the antagonistic phase, there was a conflict between the government and Muslims. This situation was characterized by a reduction in the role of political parties and avoidance of discussions about ideologies other than Pancasila, especially those related to religion. Some expectations from Muslim groups were not responded to by the government, including the request to restore Masyumi, which was terminated in 1960\textsuperscript{44}; ideological issues regarding the implementation of Islam as the state ideology and application of the Jakarta Charter; the formation of a political party based on Islam, namely, the Indonesian Islamic Democratic Party initiated by Mohammad Hatta; and reactivation of the Indonesian Islamic Party.

In the critical reciprocal phase, the government and Muslims sought to build a relationship based on mutual trust, thereby reducing suspicion between the two parties. This was demonstrated through mutual understanding between Islamic interests and the policies of President Suharto’s government. From 1982 to 1985, many Islamic groups began to accept the single principle of Pancasila as the basis of state ideology and social and political organizations.

In the accommodative phase, the relationship between the government and Muslims began to improve because all Islamic organizations accepted the single principle of Pancasila. This was marked by the inclusion of Muslims in the elite political system and bureaucracy. This pattern of accommodative relationship began to be felt after the enactment of the Law on Banking (see Figure 2).\textsuperscript{45}

On March 25, 1992, the government ratified and promulgated Law Number 7 of 1992 concerning Banking, followed by the stipulation of Government Regulation Number 70 of 1992 concerning Commercial Banks and Government Regulation Number 72 of 1992 concerning Banks Based on Profit Sharing Principles.

On the basis of these regulations, commercial banks can conduct business activities based on the profit-sharing principle. Additionally, banks that conduct their business activities based on the principle of profit sharing are required to have a Shariah Supervisory Board (Dewan Pengawas Syariah-DPS) formed by the bank based on the results of consultations with the institution that is the forum for Indonesian ulama, namely, the Indonesian Ulama Council.

The Indonesian Ulama Council responded positively to the enactment of Government Regulation No. 72 of 1992. This was marked by the issuance of recommendations from the Ulama Workshop on Shariah Mutual Funds on July 29 to 30, 1997, in Jakarta, namely, the need for an institution that specifically handles activities or business activities in Islamic financial institutions. The recommendations of the workshop were then followed up by the Indonesian Ulama Council by holding a meeting of the team for the establishment of a fatwa institution on October 14, 1997. On November 10, 1998, a fatwa institution called the National Shariah Council - Indonesian Ulama Council was established (Decree No. Kep-754/MUI/II/1999).

principles” has been revised to “bank based on shariah principles.” After the issuance of the law, it was followed by several decrees of the Board of Directors of Bank Indonesia and Bank Indonesia Regulations.

On May 12, 1999, Central Bank in Indonesia (Bank Indonesia) issued a decree on the implementation of shariah business activities for commercial and rural banks (SK Direksi BI No. 32/34/KEP/DIR and SK Direksi BI No. 32/36/KEP/DIR). The name of the National Shariah Council appears in both decrees, and its definition is explained in each decree.

The National Shariah Council is a council established by the MUI, which has the duty and authority to ensure the conformity between the products, services, and business activities of banks with Shariah Principles.

After 5 years, the aforementioned two Bank Indonesia Board of Directors decrees were revoked and declared invalid as of October 14, 2004, and were replaced by the Bank Indonesia Regulation No. 6/24/PBI/2004 and Bank Indonesia Regulation No. 6/17/PBI/2004. The definition of the National Shariah Council was changed after the issuance of the two Bank Indonesia Regulations, from “tasked and authorized to ensure conformity between products, services, and business activities of banks with Shariah Principles” to “tasked and authorized to determine fatwas on products and services in the business activities of Islamic banks.”

Along with the development of Islamic economic activities, including the increasing public awareness of the practice of business and financial transactions based on shariah principles, the duties and authority of National Shariah Council - Indonesian Ulama Council are expanded to become an institution that determines fatwas on economics, business, and Islamic finance and supervises the implementation of these fatwas (Article 1 Point 1 of MUI Regulation No: 11/PO-MUI/VIII/2021). The addition of the duties and authority of the National Shariah Council - Indonesian Ulama Council is outlined in the National Shariah Council - Indonesian Ulama Council bylaws, which are authorized by Indonesian Ulama Council Regulation No. Kep-407/MUI/IV/2016: Kep-407/MUI/IV/2016. In 2018, the National Shariah Council - Indonesian Ulama Council by laws were amended again through MUI Regulation No. Kep-11/PO-MUI/II/2018: Kep-11/PO-MUI/II/2018 and finally changed in 2021 through MUI Regulation No. Kep-11/PO-MUI/VIII/2018: Kep-11/PO-MUI/VIII/2021. Thus, since the National Shariah Council - Indonesian Ulama Council was established, the National Shariah Council - Indonesian Ulama Council bylaws have been amended twice.

One of the duties and authorities of National Shariah Council - Indonesian Ulama Council as stipulated in the Organizational Regulation of the Indonesian Ulama Council Number: Kep-11/PO-MUI/VIII/2021 is to determine fatwas and supervise the implementation of fatwas through the Shariah Supervisory Board. Meanwhile, one of the authorities of National Shariah Council - Indonesian Ulama Council, namely: 1) to give a warning to Islamic financial institutions, shariah business institutions, and shariah economic institutions that deviate from the fatwa; and 2) if the warning is not heeded, then National Shariah Council - Indonesian Ulama Council can provide recommendations to the competent authorities.

Second, the development of Islamic economic institutions in Indonesia is one of the factors in the issuance of National Sharia Council - Indonesian Ulama Council fatwa. The development of the Islamic economy symbolized by Islamic financial institutions is one of the drivers of the issuance of the National Sharia Council - Indonesian Ulama Council fatwa (see Figure 3).

Shariah financial institutions existed around 1991, including (1) Islamic Rural Bank al-Azhar in Jakarta, Islamic Rural Bank Berkah Amal Sejahtera, and Islamic Rural Bank Dana Mardhatillah established on August 19, 1991; (2) Islamic Rural Bank Amanah Rabaniah in Bandung on October 24, 1991; (3) Bank Muamalat Indonesia established on November 1, 1991; and (4) Islamic Rural Bank Hareukat in Aceh established on November 10, 1991.\(^\text{53}\)

After the government ratified and promulgated Law Number 10 of 1998 concerning Amendments to Law Number 7 of 1992 concerning Banking, the regulation explicitly regulated two banking systems (dual banking system): conventional and Shariah. This opportunity was welcomed by banking services businesses by establishing several shariah banks as Shariah Business Units (Unit Usaha Syariah-UUS).

The first Shariah Business Unit to use a dual banking system, Bank IFI (Indonesia Finance and Investment Company), founded on June 28, 1999, was the first Shariah Business Unit to use a dual banking system. It was subsequently named Bank IFI Syariah Branch.\(^\text{54}\) It was followed by Bank Syariah Mandiri, which was the result of the conversion of PT Bank Susila Bakti (BSB); therefore, BSB’s business activities changed from a conventional bank to a bank that operates on the basis of shariah principles with the name Bank Syariah Mandiri as stated in the Notarial Deed: Sutjipto, SH, No. 23 dated September 8, 1999. The change in BSB’s business activities to become a shariah commercial bank was confirmed by the Governor of Bank Indonesia through BI Governor Decree No. 1/24/KEP.BI/1999, October 25, 1999. Furthermore, through the Decree of the Senior Deputy Governor of Bank Indonesia No. 1/1/KEP.DGS/-1999, BI approved the name change to PT Bank Syariah Mandiri. Following this legal inauguration and recognition, PT Bank Syariah Mandiri officially started operating on Monday, Rajab 25, 1420 H or November 1, 1999.\(^\text{55}\)

On July 27, 2004, it was followed by Bank Syariah Mega Indonesia. It was initially known as Bank Usaha Tugu (Usaha Tugu Bank), a commercial bank that was founded on July 14, 1990, and then acquired by Mega Corpora (formerly Para Group) through Mega Corpora (formerly Para Global Investindo) and Para Mitra Investama in 2001. This acquisition was followed by a change in business activities on July 27, 2004, from a conventional commercial bank to a shariah commercial bank under the name Bank Syariah Mega Indonesia, which officially operated on August 25, 2004.\(^\text{56}\) business activities based on shariah principles after obtaining a business license through Bank Indonesia Governor Decree No. 6/71/KEP.GBI.2004 by establishing a Sharia Business Unit. It was followed by Bank Tabungan Negara Syariah, which began operating on February 14, 2005. Furthermore, on November 17, 2008, Bank Rakyat Indonesia Syariah officially started changing business activities that previously operated conventionally into banking activities based on shariah principles. With the increasing number of Islamic financial institutions in Indonesia, fatwa National Shariah Council - Indonesian Ulama Council is needed as an ideal (normative) framework and operational guideline in conducting the business activities of Islamic financial institutions.

On the basis of the aforementioned explanation, the factor behind the issuance of the National Shariah Council - Indonesian Ulama Council fatwa is the existence of regulations governing the obligation for every Islamic financial institution to conduct its business activities based on shariah principles. Additionally, the institutional development of the Islamic economy continues to increase and is followed by various product innovations in each financial institution; therefore, it requires fatwa National Shariah Council - Indonesian Ulama Council as a legal provision (normative) and an operational guideline in conducting its business activities in the form of funding, financing, and service.

in Indonesia, then the fatwa of National Shariah Council - Indonesian Ulama Council is not included in the types and hierarchy of statutory regulations.\textsuperscript{60} Because the fatwa of National Shariah Council - Indonesian Ulama Council is not formed and stipulated by an institution or body authorized by law to form and establish a statutory regulation.\textsuperscript{61}

The term legislation is often referred to as regulation. The use of the word regulation, for legal scholars, is often connoted as a legal instrument. Conversely, sociologists connote regulation as another form of social control.\textsuperscript{62} The use of the word regulation in Indonesia is limited to formal legal sources in the form of laws and regulations,\textsuperscript{63} where the statutory regulations must be a written legal norm, made by an authorized institution or official, and binding (has forced power). According to Peter Mahmud Marzuki, laws and regulations have two characteristics: universally applicable and outwardly binding.\textsuperscript{64}

However, legal decisions as stipulated in the fatwa of National Shariah Council - Indonesian Ulama Council can be legally binding if the following requirements are met: First, legal decisions in fatwas are legitimized by institutions granted the authority to form and stipulate laws and regulations, so that legal decisions in fatwas become laws and regulations, such as Bank Indonesia Regulations (\textit{Peraturan Bank Indonesia-PBI}), Financial Services Authority Regulations (\textit{Peraturan Otoritas Jasa Keuangan-POJK}), and Regional Regulations (\textit{Peraturan Daerah-Perda}). Council legal decisions have begun to be transformed into laws and regulations, for example, Law no. 21 of 2008, POJK No. 24/POJK.03/2015, POJK No. 13/POJK.03/2021, PBI No. 10/16/PBI/2008 concerning Amendments to PBI No. 9/19/PBI/2007, and Bandung Regency Regional Regulations Number 6 of 2020 concerning Halal Tourism. Second, legal decisions in fatwas are used as the basis for legal considerations by judges—thus, legal decisions in fatwas that have turned into rulings become binding for the litigants. Third, legal decisions in fatwas are used as the basis for legal considerations by arbitrators—thus, legal decisions in fatwas that have turned into arbitral rulings become binding for the parties to the dispute. Fourth, legal decisions in fatwas are used as one of the clauses in the agreement—thus, legal decisions in fatwas that have entered into the agreement are binding for the parties to the agreement. The binding legal decision in the fatwa National Shariah Council - Indonesian Ulama Council is not due to the position of the fatwa but due to the change in form from fatwa to statutory regulations, court decisions, arbitration decisions, and agreements agreed by the parties. The existence of fatwa National Shariah Council - Indonesian Ulama Council in practice in Islamic financial institutions can be seen in the following explanation.

First, fatwa National Shariah Council - Indonesian Ulama Council is a legal decision and guideline for Islamic financial institutions related to whether or not to conduct new types of business activities for which there is no fatwa. This means that the type of business activity in Islamic financial institutions can be implemented if there are already legal provisions in the National Shariah Council - Indonesian Ulama Council fatwa. This argument is based on the provisions of Article 18 paragraph (2) POJK No.24/POJK.03/2015.

Second, the National Shariah Council - Indonesian Ulama Council fatwa is a legal decision that must be used as an ideal (normative) framework and operational guideline in conducting business activities based on shariah principles in the economic, business, and financial fields. Shariah principles are defined by the fatwa issued by the National Shariah Council - Indonesian Ulama Council. The obligation of business actors to submit and comply with the fatwa of National Shariah Council - Indonesian Ulama Council is regulated by various statutory regulations (see Table 1).

Third, the fatwa of National Shariah Council - Indonesian Ulama Council is a guideline for the Shariah Supervisory Board in conducting its duties. The existence of a Shariah Supervisory Board in every Islamic financial institution is a must. One of the duties of the Shariah Supervisory Board is to oversee the implementation of fatwas and decisions of the National Shariah Council - Indonesian Ulama Council. The Shariah Supervisory Board will report to the National Shariah Council - Indonesian Ulama Council if Islamic financial services business actors deviate from the fatwa of National Shariah Council - Indonesian Ulama Council. Furthermore, the National Shariah Council - Indonesian Ulama Council will warn Islamic financial institutions to stop deviating from the fatwa issued by the National Shariah Council - Indonesian Ulama Council. If the warning is not conveyed, National Shariah Council - Indonesian Ulama Council can make a report to the Financial Services Authority (Otoritas Jasa Keuangan-OJK).

Conclusion

Fatwa formation using a centralized mode, as used by Malaysia, Sudan, Pakistan, and Indonesia, can result in uniform legal decisions for the same cases across all Islamic financial institutions. Conversely, the decentralized model used by Singapore, the Philippines, and Thailand can produce diverse legal decisions for the same case in each Islamic financial institution. The existence of fatwa National Shariah Council - Indonesian Ulama Council is inseparable from the legal politics of Islamic economic regulations and policies in Indonesia. This can be seen from various regulations and policies on Islamic economics in Indonesia, which require that every business activity or activity of Islamic financial institutions must be conducted in accordance with the fatwa of National Shariah Council - Indonesian Ulama Council. It is necessary for every Islamic financial institution to implement fatwa National Shariah Council - Indonesian Ulama Council and provide sanctions for every Islamic financial institution that violates it. The legal formal position of fatwa National Shariah Council - Indonesian Ulama Council is excluded from the legislation because the fatwa is not formed by an institution that is given the authority to form legislation (the National Shariah Council-Indonesian Ulama Council is not a government institution). However, in legal substances, the position of fatwa National Shariah Council - Indonesian Ulama Council is morally and legally binding for all Islamic financial institutions. The binding of fatwa National Shariah Council - Indonesian Ulama Council to legal substances is caused by orders from statutory regulations. Research on the comparison of the effectiveness of sharia governance in Indonesia and other countries is an important issue that will be developed by researchers in future studies.
